STATEWIDE CURRENT SITUATION: Tropical Storm Harvey continues to produce devastating flooding over southeast Texas. As of 4:00 AM CDT on Wednesday, August 30, 2017 Harvey made landfall just west of Cameron LA with 45 miles per hour (mph) winds. Harvey is moving north-northeast at 7 mph.

Heavy rain and flash flood potential will continue through Wednesday for East Texas (Beaumont/Port Arthur/Orange). Additional rainfall accumulations over the next couple days of 3 to 6 inches are expected with the storm.

Much less of a concern are the wind, surge, and tornado impacts. Tropical storm force winds will be possible along the upper Texas coast and into portions of the Houston/Galveston area today. Minor storm surge/coastal flooding will also be possible along the upper Texas coast with elevated tides of 2-4 feet above average possible. A few brief, weak tornadoes are possible for extreme southeast Texas (east of Houston) today and tomorrow.

Significant River Flood Outlook

Valid: 8/29/2017 - 9/3/2017

West Gulf River Forecast Center 8/29/2017 12:09:15 PM

SIGNIFICANT RIVER FLOODING POSSIBLE.

SIGNIFICANT RIVER FLOODING LIKELY.

SIGNIFICANT RIVER
FLOODING OCCURRING OR IS IMMINENT.

Significant River Flooding Impacts include:
Roads adversely affected. Residential, commercial, industrial, and/or agricultural areas affected. May require evacuation of people.

NOTE: Flash Flooding or Minor River Flooding will NOT be included in this outlook.

Neches Basin - Record Flooding - Recent heavy rain and the additional anticipated rains for the next couple of days will generate moderate to near record flooding at several locations along the Neches from Diboll (DIBT2) and Rockland to Beaumont. Both Village Creek (KOUT2) and Pine Island Bayou (SOLT2) are rising into historic levels.

Brazos Basin - Record Flooding - The very lower end of the Brazos river system has received between 4-9 inches at RMOT2 and below in the past 24 hours ending at 12z Tuesday morning. A total of 4 to 9 inches fell at WBZT2 and below for the 24 hours ending at 12z on Monday morning. The Brazos river system has received between 7 to 12 inches at WBZT2 and HPTDT2 and below in the 24 hours period ending at 12z on Sunday morning. The lower end of the Brazos received 4 to 10 inches of precipitation in the previous 24 hour period ending at 12z on Saturday. The storm total MAP in the 27 to 38 inch range for the lower Brazos.

It cannot be stressed enough that this is a local event for the lower Brazos. Much of the precipitation that has fallen and is forecast to occur, will occur on top of the lower Brazos river. This scenario is vastly different than the 2016 Memorial Day flood, which was largely almost entirely driven by routed flow through the lower Brazos.

The largest impacts (Major Flood Stage) will be occurring at the lower end of the Brazos at: the Brazos River at San Felipe (BAWT2), the Brazos River at Richmond (RMOT2), Brazos River at Rosharon (ROST2), and Brazos River at West Columbia (WCBT2).

Current forecasts are based on 72 hours of QPF. Future QPF beyond 72 hours may drive the crest higher and later. Remaining QPF values for the next 72 hours have been lowered. Lowering of the future QPF has reduced the crest at some locations. River forecast confidence will increase in the next 24 to 48 hours as upstream crests arrive and Harvey moves out of the area.

Guadalupe Basin - Major Flooding - Heavy rainfall from Harvey significantly affected the lower portions of the Guadalupe River basin over the weekend, and routed water is still making its way through the system. Expect major and some near record flooding as a result. Additional rainfall is not expected in this event.

All tributaries including Sandies Creek near Westhoff (WHOT2), the San Marcos River, and Plum Creek have crested and are now falling, although Sandies Creek will remain in major flood for one more day. The Plum Creek gage near Luling (LULT2) is still non-operational after being washed out in the flood.

On the Guadalupe River, the crest has passed through Gonzales (GNLT2) which remains in moderate flood, and is now moving through Cuero (CUET2) nearly eight feet above major flood stage. Major flooding is also forecast downstream at Victoria (VICT2) and at du Pont Plant near Bloomington (DUPT2).

Coletto Creek reservoir remains above conservation pool and is releasing roughly 2,000 cfs. Coletto Creek near Victoria (CCVT2) will now remain below criteria.

Lavaca-Navidad Basin - Major Flooding - Harvey rainfall is causing major flooding across the Lavaca-Navidad Basin.

San Jacinto Basin - Major Flooding - Most of the basins across the San Jacinto system, including the larger creeks and bayous, are experiencing or forecast to experience major to record flooding. While the rainfall may slowly taper off over the next few days, significant flooding will continue into the weekend and mostly likely next week. Lake Conroe has started reducing releases. Lake Houston releases will continue. Addicks and Barker Reservoirs are making releases as well.

Trinity Basin - Major Flooding - Flooding is forecast on the Trinity River from major flood levels at Menard Creek at Rye (RYET2) and other points along the mainstem from Riverside (RVRT2) downstream to Liberty (LBYT2).

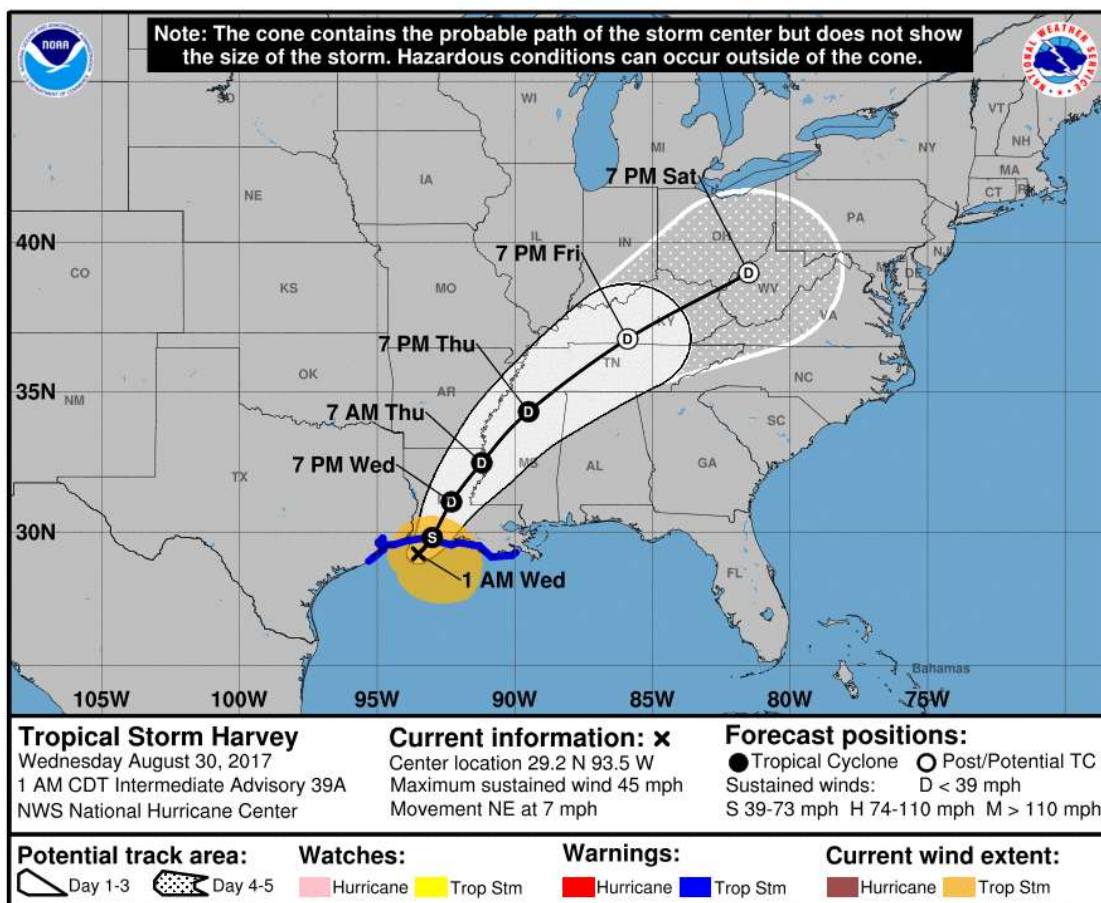

Colorado Basin - Major Flooding - Harvey rainfall is causing major flooding across the San Bernard basin.

Sabine Basin - Major Flooding - Widespread, intense rainfall associated with Harvey (both observed and forecast) will produce moderate to major flooding on the lower Sabine River system from Rosepine and Bon Wier downstream.

San Bernard Basin - Major Flooding - Harvey rainfall is causing widespread major to record flooding across the Lavaca-Navidad basin.
